SCHOOL CHILDREN TO VIEW EXHIBIT
After months of preparation, the Los Angeles County Museum in Exposition Park, on Saturday, May 14, will open for the first time its second hall of African animals.
The entire collection of African mammals is the largest of its kind in the West. The animals in the collection were obtained for the Museum by the late Leslie Simpson. Mr. Simpson, a graduate of the University of California, was a mining engineer who, in his early years, went to South Africa and became one of the foremost big game hunters of that continent.
The Museum's habitat groups are visited by thousands of school children as well as many adults, and afford an unusual opportunity to observe and learn about American and African animals which are presented in their native environments.

Too bad this guy's attention to his fishing lapsed just about the same time his sportman's Plaster Policy lapsed. He'll have worse luck than "a wet whatchamacallit and a hungry gut" this trip!
